UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

HARRY DENNIS and JON KOZ, individually and on behalf of those similarly situated,

Plaintiffs,

vs.

KELLOGG CO.,

Defendant .

CASE NO. 09-CV-1786- IEG (WMC)

ORDER:

1. GRANTING MOTION FOR FINAL SETTLEMENT APPROVAL, ATTORNEYS' FEES, AND INCENTIVE AWARDS;

[Doc. No. 101]
2. OVERRULING ALL OBJECTIONS AND DENYING OBJECTOR'S FEE REQUEST

Before the Court is Plaintiffs' motion for final settlement approval and attorneys' fees and costs, as well as several objections, one of which also requests attorneys' fees. For the reasons below, the Court GRANTS Plaintiffs' motion in its entirety, OVERRULES all objections, and DENIES objector's request for attorneys' fees.

BACKGROUND

This is a consumer class action alleging Defendant Kellogg Company made false and unsubstantiated representations in advertising and labeling its Frosted Mini-Wheats cereal products. The action originally settled with the approval of this Court on April 5, 2011. [See Doc. No. 49.] Under the original settlement, all

1 claims¹ were released in exchange for:

- 2 • a $2.75 million cash fund for distribution to class members on a claims-3 made basis;
- 4 • Kellogg distributing, pursuant to the cy pres doctrine, $5.5 million of 5 food products to charities to feed the indigent;
- 6 • Kellogg refraining from using the challenged representations in 7 advertising for three years; and
- 8 • approximately $2 million in attorneys' fees and costs.

9 The original settlement's value thus totaled approximately $10.5 million. With 10 attorney and claims administration fees and costs subtracted, the value totaled 11 approximately $8.5 million.

12 But on September 4, 2012, the Ninth Circuit reversed the final settlement 13 approval order, vacated the judgment and award of attorneys' fees, and remanded for 14 further proceedings, finding that the cy pres award under the terms of the original 15 settlement failed to target the plaintiff class. See Dennis v. Kellogg Company, 697 16 F.3d 858, 869 (9th Cir. 2012). While the asserted claims concern fair competition 17 and consumer protection, the original cy pres award would benefit the indigent. The 18 Ninth Circuit reasoned that “[t]his noble goal . . . has little or nothing to do with the 19 purposes of the underlying lawsuit or the class of plaintiffs involved.” Id. at 866.

20 On remand, the parties negotiated a revised settlement, which the Court 21 preliminarily approved on May 3, 2013. [Doc. No. 95.] Under the revised 22 settlement, all claims arising out of the challenged advertising are released in 23 exchange for:

- 24 • a $4 million cash fund for distribution to class members on a claims-25 made basis, any remaining balance of which to be distributed equally, 26 pursuant to the cy pres doctrine, among recipients Consumers Union, 27 Consumer Watchdog, and the Center for Science in the Public Interest; 28 and
- Kellogg refraining from using the challenged representations in advertising for three years.

¹ The Amended Complaint alleges claims of unjust enrichment, and violation of California's Unfair Competition Law and Consumer Legal Remedies Act, and similar laws of other states. [See Doc. No. 22.]

1 The revised settlement's value thus totals $4 million plus the value of the agreed 2 injunctive relief. Minus requested attorneys' fees and expenses of $1 million as well 3 as approximately $900,000 in claims notice and administration costs, the cash value 4 to the class totals approximately $2.1 million. From this cash fund, class members 5 that submit a valid claim are entitled to cash distributions of between $5 and $45. In 6 its preliminary approval order, the Court ordered the settling parties to address the 7 revised settlement's diminished value yet seemingly unchanged attorneys' fees and 8 expenses.

9 Notice issued and out of a putative class of hundreds of thousands only 6 10 objections were submitted. [See Doc. Nos. 102 (filing by Obj. Henderson), 103 (joint 11 filing by Objs. Jan and Onzen), 105 (filing by Obj. Santiago), 107 and 109 (filings 12 by Obj. Cicero), 113-1, Ex. 3 (Obj. by Kutchka), 113-1, Ex. 4 (Obj. by Sagaribay)] 13 The settling parties filed reply briefs addressing the objections as well as the Court's 14 concerns. [Doc. Nos. 112, 113.] As to the Court's concerns, Plaintiffs explain that 15 although the combined, total fees and costs appear unchanged, the cost of notice has 16 increased due to expanded notice to the class while the requested fees have 17 decreased by 50%. On September 9, 2013, the Court heard oral argument on behalf 18 of the settling parties and objectors.

19 For the reasons below, the Court:

- 20 • GRANTS final settlement approval;
- 21 • GRANTS certification of the settlement class;
- 22 • GRANTS class counsel's request for attorneys' fees and costs;
- 23 • GRANTS the requested incentive awards to the class representatives;
- 24 • OVERRULES all objections; and
- 25 • DENIES objector's request for attorneys' fees.

DISCUSSION

I. Final Approval of the Settlement

“Voluntary conciliation and settlement are the preferred means of dispute resolution in complex class action litigation.” Smith v. CRST Van Expedited, Inc., 2013 WL 163293, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 14, 2013) (citing Officers for Justice v. Civil Service Com’n of City and County of San Francisco, 688 F.2d 615, 625 (9th Cir. 1982)). “And though, unlike the settlement of most private civil actions, class actions may be settled only with the approval of the district court, the court’s intrusion upon what is otherwise a private consensual agreement negotiated between the parties to a lawsuit must be limited.” Id. (internal quotation omitted); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(e). “Courts are not to reach any ultimate conclusions on the contested issues of fact and law which underlie the merits of the dispute, nor is the proposed settlement to be judged against a hypothetical or speculative measure of what might have been achieved by the negotiators.” Id. “Rather, ‘a district court’s only role in reviewing the substance of [a] settlement is to ensure that it is fair, adequate, and free of collusion.’” Id. (quoting Lane v. Facebook, 696 F.3d 811, 819 (9th Cir. 2012)).

“In making this appraisal, courts have ‘broad discretion’ to consider a range of factors such as ‘the strength of the plaintiffs’ case; the risk, expense, complexity, and likely duration of further litigation; the risk of maintaining class action status throughout the trial; the amount offered in settlement; the extent of discovery completed and the stage of the proceedings; the experience and views of counsel; the presence of a governmental participant; and the reaction of the class members to the proposed settlement.’” Id. “The relative importance to be attached to any factor will depend upon and be dictated by the nature of the claim(s) advanced, the type(s) of relief sought, and the unique facts and circumstances presented by each individual case.” Officers for Justice, 688 F.2d at 625.

Here, after careful review, the proposed settlement appears fair, adequate, and 1 free of collusion. As discussed more fully below, the settlement is the product of 2 arms-length negotiations by experienced counsel before a respected mediator, 3 reached after and in light of years of hard fought litigation and ample discovery into 4 the asserted claims. As a result of counsel's efforts, the settlement provides the class 5 with both a substantial cash recovery as well as significant injunctive relief, which 6 together amount to over $4,000,000 in value achieved for the class. Moreover, the 7 reaction of the class has been largely positive and the few objections are without 8 merit.

9 A. Strengths and Risks of the Case and Value of the Settlement

10 This case was initiated in 2009 and has progressed through considerable 11 litigation and discovery into the asserted claims, an initial approved settlement, a 12 lengthy appeal, as well as further discovery and mediation on remand. Plaintiffs 13 maintain they have developed a strong case. [See Doc. No. 101-1 at 4-11, 24-25, 28-14 29.] Defendant disagrees and, should the case not settle, has committed to 15 vigorously contesting the asserted claims. [Id. at 25.] But both parties acknowledge 16 the significant risks and costs presented by further litigation and which are avoided 17 by this reasonable compromise. Settlement was reached with much of the case still 18 to be litigated. This prevents the likely expense, complexity, and duration of, inter 19 alia, full discovery, summary judgment, expert reports, trial, and any subsequent 20 appeals. Numerous issues remain in dispute, including, e.g., whether the contested 21 advertising constitutes puffery, whether the claims are amenable to class wide proof, 22 whether common issues predominate, and the measure and extent of damages. In 23 addition to being expensive, going forward risks further exposure and uncertainty 24 for Defendant as well as impairment or delay of relief to the class.

25 Against these considerations, the parties have agreed to a settlement fund of 26 $4,000,000, which results in individual payouts to claimants of at least $5 and up to 27 $45. [See Doc. No. 101-1 at 12.] These amounts reflect the retail cost of between 1 28 and 9 boxes of cereal, the advertising of which forms the basis of this dispute. This

1 is a favorable result given the considerable challenges Plaintiffs face should 2 litigation continue. Moreover, the settlement avoids the risks of extreme results on 3 either end, i.e., complete or no recovery. Thus, it is plainly reasonable for the parties 4 at this stage to agree that the actual recovery realized and risks avoided here 5 outweigh the opportunity to pursue potentially more favorable results through full 6 adjudication. These factors support approval. See Officers for Justice, 688 F.2d at 7 625 (settlement is necessarily “an amalgam of delicate balancing, gross 8 approximations and rough justice.”); Facebook, 696 F.3d at 819 (“the question 9 whether a settlement is fundamentally fair . . . is different from the question whether 10 the settlement is perfect in the estimation of the reviewing court.”).

11 B. Endorsement of Experienced Counsel

12 Class counsel attest to decades of experience litigating class actions, including 13 similar litigation on behalf of consumers and a range of other complex matters.
14 [See, e.g., Doc. No. 90-3 (firm resumes).] “Given their extensive experience and 15 understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of cases such as this, class counsel’s 16 endorsement weighs in favor of final approval.” Smith, 2013 WL 163293, at *4; see 17 also Hartless v. Clorox Co., 273 F.R.D. 630, 641 (S.D. Cal. 2011) (“The 18 recommendations of counsel are given great weight since they are most familiar with 19 the facts of the underlying litigation.”); Singer v. Becton Dickinson and Co., 2010 20 WL 2196104, at *6 (S.D. Cal. June 1, 2010) (same).

21 C. Reaction of the Class

22 The reaction of the class has been almost entirely positive. Of a putative class 23 covering hundreds of thousands of purchases of cereal nationwide, [see Doc. No. 95 24 (recognizing numerosity of the putative class)], only 6 objections have been 25 submitted. “The small percentage of . . . objectors strongly supports the fairness of 26 the settlement.” Smith, 2013 WL 163293, at *4; see also Hartless, 273 F.R.D. at 27 641 (“The absence of a large number of objections to a proposed class action 28 settlement raises a strong presumption that the terms of the settlement are favorable

1 to the class members.”).

2 Moreover, the few objections submitted are without merit.²

3 1. Objection of Kendal Mark Jan and Toni Ozen

4 Jan and Ozen object to class counsel’s purported failure to identify the 5 intended cy pres recipients and purported failure to file a request for attorneys’ fees.
6 [Doc. No. 103.] But the settlement itself, Plaintiffs’ briefing, as well as the Court’s 7 preliminary approval order, all identified the three intended cy pres recipients, [Doc.
8 Nos. 90, 95], and class counsel did in fact file a request for fees along with its 9 motion for final approval, [101-1 at 42-51]. Thus, Jan and Ozen’s objection appears 10 baseless.

11 Moreover, Jan and Ozen’s objection fails to provide their signatures, 12 telephone numbers, or addresses, all of which are required per the terms of the 13 settlement notice. [See Doc. No. 103.] With these omissions, Jan or Ozen fail to 14 establish that they are members of the class with the right to object. See In re Apple 15 Sec. Litig., 2011 WL 1877988, at *2 n.4 (N.D. Cal. May 17, 2011) (finding objector

16
17 ² Many jurists and commentators bemoan that “too much of the controversy 18 in many class action litigations seems to center on the issue of attorneys’ fees” and that, 19 as a result, “a cottage industry has developed of professional objectors, where again the 20 emphasis or at least the primary motivation is attorneys’ fees.” In re Countrywide 21 Financial Corp. Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig., 2010 WL 3328249, at *4 (W.D. Ky.
22 Aug. 24, 2010). As a corollary, “when assessing the merits of an objection to a class 23 action settlement, courts consider the background and intent of objectors and their 24 counsel, particularly when indicative of a motive other than putting the interest of the 25 class members first.” In re Law Office of Jonathan E. Fortman, LLC, 2013 WL 26 414476, at *5 (E.D. Mo. Feb. 1, 2013). In this light, the Court notes that present 27 objectors’ counsel, Darrell Palmer and Theodore Frank of the Center for Class Action 28 Fairness, have both been widely and repeatedly criticized as serial, professional, or otherwise vexatious objectors. As to attorney Darrell Palmer, see, e.g., In re Oil Spill by Oil Rig Deepwater Horizon, F.R.D., 2013 WL 144042, at *48 n.40 (E.D. La. Jan.
11, 2013) (noting that “Mr. Palmer has been deemed a ‘serial objector’” with a history of “admitt[ed] . . . ‘bad faith and vexatious conduct’”); Heekin v. Anthem, Inc., 2013 WL 752637, at *3 (S.D. Ind. Feb. 27, 2013) (finding “bad faith and vexatious conduct on the part of . . . attorney Darrell Palmer” and noting his reputation as “a serial objector”). As to attorney Theodore Frank, see, e.g., Dewey v. Volkswagen of America, 728 F.Supp.2d 546, 575 (D. N.J. 2010) (describing attorney Theodore Frank as a “professional objector” of which “federal courts are increasingly weary”); Lonardo v.
Travelers Indem. Co., 706 F. Supp. 2d 766, (N.D. Ohio 2010) (criticizing the Center for Class Action Fairness as a serial objector “long on ideology and short on law”).

1 “lacks standing to object [because] he did not provide evidence to show that he is a 2 class member.”). As Jan and Ozen appear to lack standing to object, their objection 3 is defective. See Moore v. Verizon Communs., Inc., 2013 WL 450365, at *4 (N.D.
4 Cal. Feb. 5, 2013) (“non-class members have no standing to object to the settlement 5 of a class action”).

6 For these reasons, the Court OVERRULES Jan and Ozen’s objection.

7 2. Objections of M. Todd Henderson

8 Objector Henderson does not object to the fairness of the settlement amount;³ 9 rather, he seeks attorneys’ fees for objectors’ prior success on appeal. But neither 10 Henderson nor his counsel, Theodore Frank of the Center for Class Action Fairness, 11 participated in the appeal. The objectors that in fact prevailed on appeal, class 12 members Stephanie Berg and Omar Rivero, [see Dennis, 697 F.3d at 863], are no 13 longer participating in this case. They have apparently terminated their association 14 with objector’s counsel Darrell Palmer, and neither objects to the present settlement 15 or moves for fees. Accordingly, the propriety of a fee award on behalf of their 16 efforts on appeal is not properly before the Court.

17 Henderson also objects that the class notice and administration costs are 18 excessive as a percentage of recovery and for including the notice costs of the 19 original settlement, and further that no such costs should be considered for purposes 20 of determining attorneys’ fees. [Doc. No. 102.] But the costs of noticing the 21 original settlement are not in fact included in the present request. [See Doc. No. 113
22 at 7.] And the Court finds the approximately $900,000 in requested notice costs 23 reasonable given the challenges of adequately noticing the disparate, nationwide

24
25 ³ Henderson concedes that claims made will likely exhaust the fund and thus 26 that a cy pres distribution will be unnecessary. [Doc. No. 102 at 16.] Nonetheless, 27 Henderson reserves the right to object to the Center for Science in the Public Interest 28 as an “activist” organization inappropriate as a cy pres recipient. [Id.] As Henderson concedes, this objection is unripe and likely to prove moot. [See Doc. No. 113-2 at 2.]
Moreover, it echoes the pot calling the kettle black; Henderson’s own counsel, Theodore Frank, works for and represents an ostensibly “activist” organization, the Center for Class Action Fairness, widely criticized as “long on ideology and short on law.” Lonardo, 706 F. Supp. 2d at 785.

1 class governed by the present settlement. [See infra §III.A.] Finally, contrary to 2 Henderson’s objection, “post-settlement cost of providing notice to the class can 3 reasonably be considered a benefit to the class,” and thus such costs are properly and 4 routinely paid from the common settlement fund. Staton v. Boeing Co., 327 F.3d 5 938, 975 (9th Cir. 2003); accord Smith, 2013 WL 163293, at *5.

6 For these reasons and in light of all briefing and oral argument on his behalf, 7 the Court OVERRULES all of Henderson’s objections and DENIES as 8 unwarranted his request for a fee award to objectors’ counsel.

9 3. Objections of Stephen Santiago

10 Objector Santiago objects that the injunctive relief provided under the 11 settlement is illusory because the advertising Kellogg agrees to refrain from has 12 already been debunked. [Doc. No. 105.] But the purported falsity of the challenged 13 advertising has not been determined. Indeed, Kellogg maintains Plaintiffs’ claims 14 would ultimately fail on the merits. Because the merits of the challenged advertising 15 remains unsettled, injunctive relief preventing such advertising constitutes a 16 substantial concession by Defendant. As such, Santiago’s objection is baseless and 17 does not undermine the fairness of the settlement. Cf. Smith v. CRST Van Expedited, 18 Inc., 2012 WL 5873701, at *6 (S.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2012) (in objecting to a proposed 19 settlement “empty assertion does not suffice”).

20 Santiago also objects that class counsel’s attorneys’ fee request is 21 insufficiently detailed and includes a “Quick Pay provision.” [Doc. No. 105 at 1.] 22 But the settlement does not in fact include a “Quick Pay provision,” as fees are not 23 paid to counsel until 10 days after final judgment is entered. [See Doc. Nos. 89 at 19; 24 113 at 17.] And the declarations of counsel detailing rates and hours worked suffice 25 even without a corresponding allocation of fees among counsel. See Staton, 327 26 F.3d at 963 n.15. Thus, the Court OVERRULES Santiago’s objections.

27 4. Objection of Dorothy Cicero

28 Objector Cicero claims that her family eats more than 3 boxes of cereal a

1 month and thus that she should be compensated for 54 boxes. But any settlement is 2 necessarily “an amalgam of delicate balancing, gross approximations and rough 3 justice.” Officers for Justice, 688 F.2d at 625. And “the question whether a 4 settlement is fundamentally fair . . . is different from the question whether the 5 settlement is perfect in the estimation of the reviewing court.” Facebook, 696 F.3d 6 at 819. Cicero’s dissatisfaction based on circumstances unique to her and her family 7 cannot undermine the overall fairness of the settlement to the class as a whole in 8 light of the significant risks posed by further litigation. See Smith, 2013 WL 9 163293, at *4 (“the proposed settlement [is not] to be judged against a hypothetical 10 or speculative measure.”). Thus, the Court OVERRULES Cicero’s objection.

11 5. Objection by Jeremy Sagaribay

12 Objector Sagaribay does not object on behalf of the class, but rather objects to 13 Defendant Kellogg Co. paying anything at all without Plaintiffs’ claims being first 14 proven at trial. [Doc. No. 113-1 at 25.] But in reviewing the proposed settlement, 15 the Court is a fiduciary to absent class members, not Defendant. See, e.g., 16 Wiesmueller v. Kosobucki, 2009 WL 4667576, at *4 (W.D. Wisc. Dec. 2, 2009) 17 (notwithstanding “the judicial duty under Rule 23 to insure that class counsel can 18 adequately represent the interests of the class,” courts owe “no such duty to 19 defendants, who may protect their own interests.”). Accordingly, objections on 20 behalf of Defendant are irrelevant and cannot undermine final approval. Thus, the 21 Court OVERRULES Sagaribay’s objections.

22 6. Objection by Jay Kutchka

23 Objector Kutchka objects that the approved notice program is insufficient 24 because he has eaten Kellogg cereal for years and did not know of this litigation 25 until recently. [Doc. No. 113-1 at 19-21.] No notice of pending litigation is 26 required; only notice of pending settlement is required. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 23.
27 Kutchka plainly received notice of the settlement. Moreover, Rule 23 only requires 28 that the notice be the “best practicable under the circumstances.” Fed. R. Civ. P.

1 23(c)(2)(B). It need not be perfect. Browning v. Yahoo! Inc., 2007 WL 4105971, at 2 *7 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2007) (“For approval, the notice need not have been 3 perfect.”). Here, the parties implemented a notice program with the assistance of an 4 experienced administrator that included print advertising, online banner advertising, 5 press releases to print, broadcast, television, and online media, and a settlement 6 website because individual notice was not possible. [See Doc. Nos. 90; 101.] This 7 extensive notice program appears sufficient and warranted under the circumstances.
8 Thus, the Court OVERRULES Kutchka’s objections.

9 D. No Suggestion Of Collusion

10 Although the Court expressed skepticism in its preliminary approval order 11 regarding the revised settlement value as compared to the corresponding fee request, 12 that skepticism has been allayed. The Court was concerned that the combined 13 attorneys’ fee request and claims administration costs appeared unchanged from the 14 last settlement, notwithstanding a significant drop in total value to the class. But 15 Plaintiffs’ final approval briefing and supporting declarations make clear that the 16 seemingly unchanged total amount reflects the increased cost of expanded claims 17 notice administration rather than static fees. In fact, the requested attorneys’ fees are 18 50% less than provided under the initial settlement. [See, e.g., Doc. No. 101-1 at 10-19 11 ($1 million present fee request versus $2 million dollar fee provision under the 20 initial settlement).] With the Court’s concerns allayed, no aspect of the settlement 21 suggests collusion. Rather the present settlement was reached through mediation 22 before the Honorable Richard Haden, [see Doc. No. 101-2 at 6], and neither the 23 requested attorneys’ fees nor the requested incentive awards appear unreasonable, 24 [see infra]. Nor have even the few objectors suggested collusion. [Cf. Doc. No. 102 25 (Henderson Obj. (“This objection does not argue that the settlement is a product of 26 collusion.”).] At bottom, “the circumstances and extent of the parties’ negotiations 27 suggest fundamental fairness and thus weigh in favor of approval.” Smith, 2013 WL 28 163293, at *4.

1 Thus, the Court OVERRULES all objections and GRANTS final approval of 2 the settlement.

3 II. Class Certification

4 With its preliminary settlement approval order, the Court preliminarily 5 certified the following settlement class:

6 All persons or entities in the United States who purchased Frosted 7 Mini-Wheats branded cereal from January 28, 2008, up to and including 8 October 1, 2009. Excluded from the Class are Kellogg's employees, officers, 9 directors, agents, and representatives and those who purchased Frosted Mini-10 Wheats for the purpose of re-sale.

11 [Doc. No. at .] Only one objector, Santiago, contests the propriety of class 12 certification, and he does so in utterly conclusory fashion. [See Doc. No. 105 (one 13 sentence objection to class certification providing no specifics or reasoning).]

14 Nothing in any of the objections or final approval briefing undermines the Court's 15 preliminary findings in regard to class certification. Accordingly, the Court 16 GRANTS final certification of this settlement class.

17 III. Class Counsel's Requests for Fees, Expenses, and Incentive Awards

18 Out of the $4 million settlement fund, class counsel seeks an award of $1 19 million in attorneys' fees and expenses, approximately $900,000 in class claims 20 notice and administration costs, and $5,000 incentive awards to class representatives 21 Koz and Dennis. [See Doc. No. 101 at 11.]

22 A. Class Counsel's Fees and Expenses

23 Because "[t]his action asserts California claims premised on diversity 24 jurisdiction," "the Court applies California law to determine both the right to and 25 method for calculating fees." Smith, 2013 WL 163293, at *5. "Under California 26 law, . . . in cases such as this, where the class benefit can be monetized with a 27 reasonable degree of certainty, a percentage of the benefit approach may be used."
28 Id. (citing In re Consumer Privacy Cases, 175 Cal. App. 4th 545, 557-58 (2009)).
"Under the percentage method, California has recognized that most fee awards based on either a lodestar or percentage calculation are 33 percent and has endorsed the 1 federal benchmark of 25 percent.” Id.; see also In re Consumer Privacy Cases, 175 2 Cal. App. 4th at 556 n. 13. “As to the settlement fund amount: “[t]he total fund c[an] 3 be used to measure whether the portion allocated to the class and to attorney fees is 4 reasonable.”” Id. (citing Manual for Complex Litigation (4th ed. 2008) § 21.71, p.

5 525). “Always, the ultimate goal is to award a reasonable fee.” Id. (internal citation 6 omitted); see also Hartless, 273 F.R.D. at 645.

7 Here, the settlement confers a total financial benefit to the class in excess of 8 $4,000,000, including both a non-reversionary cash fund of $4,000,000 and 9 injunctive relief that will benefit both class members and non-class consumers going 10 forward. In light of the results achieved, the requested fees appear reasonable. The 11 settlement provides for, and class counsel here seeks, an award of $1,000,000 in fees 12 which constitutes 25% of the cash fund. This percentages compares favorably with 13 both California (33%) and federal (25%) benchmarks and the requested fee 14 compares well with a lodestar cross-check as well. Applying class counsel’s hourly 15 rates ranging from $145 (for law clerks) to $950 (for name partners), which fall 16 within typical rates for attorneys of comparable experience, the total lodestar totals 17 $975,526.25. [See, e.g., Doc. No. 101-2 at 10 (summary class counsel hourly rates 18 and hours expended).] The $1 million requested fee is essentially at cost without 19 any multiplier and thus appears reasonable, perhaps even a discount, given the risks 20 borne by counsel proceeding on contingency, the duration and complexity of the 21 case, and the substantial benefit realized for the class. Cf. Sproul v. Astrue, 2013 22 WL 394056, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 30, 2013) (“Courts are loathe to penalize 23 experienced counsel for efficient representation under contingency agreements.”); 24 see also Singer, 2010 WL 2196104, at *8 (awarding 33 1/3% fee in class action); 25 Ingalls v. Hallmark Mktg. Corp., Case No. 08cv4342, Doc. No. 77 (C.D. Cal. Oct.
26 16, 2009) (awarding 33.33% fee on a $5.6 million class action); Birch v. Office 27 Depot, Inc., Case No. 06cv1690, Doc. No. 48 (S.D. Cal. Sept. 28, 2007) (awarding a 28 40% fee on a $16 million class action); Rippee v. Boston Mkt. Corp., Case No.

1 05cv1359, Doc. No. 70 (S.D. Cal. Oct. 10, 2006) (awarding a 40% fee on a $3.75 2 million class action).

3 The requested claims notice and administration costs also appear reasonable.
4 Class counsel seeks $908,665 in claims notice and administration costs. [See Doc.
5 No. 101-1 at 11.] These amounts are within that contemplated by the settlement, 6 have been endorsed by experienced counsel and claims administration consultants 7 involved in this case, and are thus presumed reasonable. See Smith, 2013 WL 8 163293, at *4 (“costs and expenses incurred by experienced counsel in creating or 9 preserving a common fund [are] presumed reasonable”). Moreover, the widely 10 disparate, nationwide class of potential claimants in this case both necessitates, and 11 justifies the increased cost of, the broad and diverse notice campaign contemplated 12 and executed under the present settlement. Cf. Malta v. Fed. Home Loans Mortg.
13 Corp., 2013 WL 444619, at *7 (S.D. Cal. Feb. 5, 2013) (approving nearly $3 million 14 in claims notice and administration costs); In re Immune Response Sec. Litig., 497 F.
15 Supp. 2d 1166, 1177-78 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (finding similar costs and expenses 16 “necessary” to class action litigation).

17 Accordingly, the Court GRANTS class counsel’s fee and expense request.

18 B. Incentive Awards to Class Representatives

19 The two class representatives, Koz and Dennis, each seek an incentive 20 payment of $5,000 for their service in prosecuting this action on behalf of the class.
21 [See Doc. No. 101-1 at 51-52.] “Incentive awards are fairly typical in class action 22 cases.” Rodriguez v. West Publishing Corp., 563 F.3d 948, 958 (9th Cir. 2009).
23 “Such awards are discretionary . . . and are intended to compensate class 24 representatives for work done on behalf of the class, to make up for financial or 25 reputational risk undertaken in bringing the action.” Id. “The criteria courts may 26 consider in determining whether to make an incentive award include: 1) the risk to 27 the class representative in commencing suit, both financial and otherwise; 2) the 28 notoriety and personal difficulties encountered by the class representative; 3) the 1 amount of time and effort spent by the class representative; 4) the duration of the 2 litigation and; 5) the personal benefit (or lack thereof) enjoyed by the class 3 representative as a result of the litigation.” Van Vranken v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 4 901 F. Supp. 294, 299 (N.D. Cal. 1995) (citations omitted).

5 Here, all factors weigh in favor of the awards sought. This consumer class 6 action risked the class representatives’ reputations and their exposure to joint and 7 several liability for counterclaims. See Martin v. AmeriPride Services, Inc., 2011 8 WL 2313604, at *4 (S.D. Cal. 2011) (acknowledging professional and legal risks 9 posed to class representatives in class actions). Further, both class representatives 10 were active in assisting class counsel in a wide variety of respects, from initiating 11 the case, reviewing pleadings, making themselves available for deposition and 12 possible trial testimony, to providing factual background and support, and 13 communicating with class counsel in regard to the case. [See, e.g., Doc. No. 101-1 14 at 51-52; 101-4.] Class representatives’ efforts and involvement have thus protected 15 and benefitted the class as a whole. See Hartless, 273 F.R.D. at 647 (class 16 representative involvement “protect[s] the interests of the class” and thus warrants 17 incentive awards). Given Koz and Dennis’s record of involvement despite the risks 18 posed, the requested incentive awards are warranted. Van Vranken, 901 F.Supp. at 19 300.

20 Moreover, the amount of the incentive payments requested, $5,000, is well 21 within if not below the range awarded in similar cases. See Smith, 2013 WL 22 163293, at *5 ($15,000 award); Singer, 2010 WL 2196104, at *9 ($25,000 award); 23 Cicero v. DirectTV, 2010 WL 2991486, at *5 (C.D. Cal. July 27, 2010) ($5,000 24 award); Van Vranken, 901 F. Supp. at 300 ($50,000 incentive award). Thus, the 25 Court GRANTS the requested class representative incentive awards.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the Court hereby:

- GRANTS final settlement approval;
- GRANTS certification of the settlement class;
- GRANTS class counsel’s request for attorneys’ fees and costs;
- GRANTS the requested incentive awards to the class representatives;
- OVERRULES all objections; and
- DENIES objector’s request for attorneys’ fees.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
